General Crozier. It is a one-story building excepting at one end, where there is a second story for storage of light material. The Chairman. What was the cost of the building destroyed by fire? General Crozier. It was very much less. That was a lightly built frame building, one story, as this is intended to be, with a shingle roof, and I don t think it cost over $30,000 altogether. It was built at different times, so it would be a little difficult to tell what the cost was; but for the building itself I don t think the cost was over $30,000; but I think there was in it perhaps $65,000 or $70,000 worth of machinery. It was not all destroyed; a good part of it was not. POWDER DEPOT NEAR DOVER, N. J. STOREHOUSES FOR...
