Justina Goldberg, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This is a story about a young girl's flight to the West. How she struggled was beyond imagination. Harsh weather conditions, the snow and ice pellets prevent her from doing anything, but her ambitious nature and determination found friends and soon she landed a job in the brokerage industry. She was twenty-five years old, naive, and didn't know what to expect of her life, but work. There was no need to think of doing it any other way. People she met in high places, from a gambler to con artist to bars and nightclubs, to heartaches and joy. It was a weekend of rendezvous. Until the time she met the German immigrant, then everything changed. From her mother's eyes, she was only ten years old, but being around with her parents back to the town where she grew up, can stir up implicit memories that automatically trigger her feelings of the past. Her mother's grip on her, prompted her to be defensive and rebellious, but no matter how she felt, memories of her 10-year-old self caused her to act like she did when she was that age. Her marriage caused a stir to the family, with a private ceremony and no mother around to cheer her. She went home to make up with her mother, but then it was too late. Her mother had passed away. Devastation and sorrows were unimaginable. She searched all old letters and found out the story of Mom in the closet, about her mother's desire for her little girl once the red blossoms came her way. This book must be read to follow the...
